The summit will consist of education and exhibits focused on the current challenges facing Georgia's families and communities. Education for real estate professionals adjusting to the changing climate will also be provided. Attendees will receive information on short sales, REO's, neighborhood revitalization, green initiatives, and many more! Consumers will be provided with an opportunity to meet with HUD approved Housing Counselors and make appointments for one-on-one counseling. The industry professional will have an opportunity to earn 3 hours continuing education credits as well.

Members of the GHA include government agencies, local municipalities, community banks, industry professionals and nonprofit organizations. These individuals volunteer their time to assist the community in finding resources for homeownership through their annual event and their website, www.gahomeownership.com. This year's annual event will include members of Housing and Urban Development, Department of Community Affairs, Freddie Mac and many more! Through this event, and their dedication throughout the year the GHA hopes to promote and preserve homeownership throughout Georgia.
